COUNTR SUBJECT PLACE ACQUIRE DATE ACQUIRE DATE OF THE UNITED OF T	T Medical ED	Treatment a	Ę	ons in POW 50X1 50X1	Camps	DATE DISTRING. OF PACE  NO. OF ENICLISTED BELOW  SUPPLEMENT  50	GES 5	50X1	54 .
PLACE ACQUIRE DATE ACQUIR	T Medical ED	Treatment a	Ę	50X1 50X1	1	NO. OF ENCLISTED BELOW	GES 5 CLS.	;	54 ·
PLACE ACQUIRE DATE ACQUIR	T Medical ED	Treatment a	Ę	50X1 50X1	1	NO. OF ENCLISTED BELOW	GES 5 CLS.	;
DATE ACQUIR	ED RED	FFECTING THE NATIONAL WINE OF TITLE 18, SEC. D. ITS TRANSMISSION SY AN UNAUTHORIZED OF THIS FROM	Ę	50X1 50X1	1	SUPPLEME	NT TO	50X1
DATE ACQUIR	RED	PPECTING THE NATIONAL WINE OF TITLE 18, SEC. D. ITS TRANSMISSION SY AN UNAUTHORIZED OF THIS FROM IS PRO		50X1		SUPPLEME	NT TO		]
ACQUIR		PPECTING THE NATIONAL WINSOFTITE 18, SEC O. ITS TRANSMISSION SY AN UNAUTHORIZES OF THIS FORM IS PROI	. DEFEMBE Flows 793 OR REVER- RESON 12 HIBITED.					- 1	] .
THIS DOCUMENT THE UNITED THE UNIT	F INFO:  SENT CONTAINS INFORMATION A TEO STATES, WITHIN THE HEA TO THE U.S. COCK, AS AMENDE 178 CONTENTS TO OR RECEIFF SV LAW. THE REPRODUCTION	PPECTING THE NATIONAL MING OF TITLE 18, SEC. D. ITS TRANSMISSION OF YAY ON AUTOPOIZED OF THIS FORM IS PROI	. DEFENSE TIONS 795 ON REVE- TERSON IS			50	0X1		_
THIS DOCUM OF THE UNI AND 784, O LATION OF PROMIBITED	HERT CONTAINS INFORMATION A TOO STATES, WITHIN THE HEA PT THE U.S. COOE, AS AMENDA 175 CONTENTS TO ON RECEIPT SEY LAW. THE REPRODUCTION	FFECTING THE NATIONAL WINGOFFITE IS, SEC O. ITS TRANSMISSION BY AN UNAUTHORIZED OF THIS FORM IS PRO!	DEFEMBE TIONE 793 OR REVE- PRISON 18	т
					HIS IS UNE	EVALUATED I	NFORMA -	TION	:
50X1 50X1 50X1	Immunization knowledge we	re to prever	two immuni nt typhoid at no ti	fever.	iich				50 50 50
50X1	immunization				USBR bef	ore 1946.
2.	number of day	doctor by a cout 4500 prodermic need cause Soviet nat was cutt typhoid fer place. The ace of a verys in between immunizati	a German PO risoners at lie availab all of camp offi ing down t the Soviet er and shor er two immun y short time no.	W doctor i Maksay at le for the the prison cials were he prisone camp offic rtly there izations me, in th  POWs	In the camp the time immunization received concerned in the camp for t	, there was tion of all ved this pr d by the hi orce. It w ess conside	the reventive gh as at erable iton	50X1 50X1 re	5( 5(
	immunization			this camp	•
3.	There were so who received However, only because there	shots in co those pris	nnection wo oners who lough malar:	ith the transaction in the serum to the seru	eatment of a received o immuniza	f malaria. I malaria s e all of the	hots
	CLAS	SIFICATION	CONFIDENTIA	T					_
	X ARMY(SGO) EV S) X AIR (SGO) X		DISTRIE	UTION	MISI	X ORR	X		1
STATE NOVVIE	-11.21	\			1	n   -   -                               	n I		1

	CONFIDENTIAL
	- 2 -
		50X1
	Prevalent Diseases
4.	The most prevalent diseases in all of the POW camps were, in order of incidence: dysentery, typhus, typhoid, and a disease known as "kopfrose" which was similar to an eczema of the head and which was accompanied with high fever. There was also considerable malaria. However, the worst of all diseases was plain starvation which I believe caused more deaths than any of the other diseases.	50)
	Treatment of Patients
5.	At the Marshansk camp, which had a capacity of 20 thousand to 25 thousand POWs, there was one male Soviet doctor in charge whose responsibility appeared to be to decide which of the POWs were able to work and which were not. The treatment of patients at Marshansk was left to the feldshers. In addition to Soviet feldshers at this camp, there were also Hungarian and Czechoslovakian feldshers but there were no German feldshers. Treatment of the prisoners was very limited and in some cases non-existent because of the lack of medical supplies no German POW doctors at Marshansk although there were several Hungarian POW doctors.
6.	At Maksay where the capacity of the camp was five thousand POWs, to the best of my knowledge there was regularly only one male Soviet doctor in charge, although at different times other male and female doctors appeared in the
X1	camp. There were also about 20 POW doctors, including German, Rumanian and Hungarian POWs and several POW feldshers. There was also one dentist although 50X1<sub>7</sub>. At one time in late 1946 there were over two thousand sick prisoners at Maksay and even though it was impossible for the one Soviet doctor to see all the patients to determine if they could work, none of the POW doctors were allowed to decide whether a prisoner was able to work or not.

- 8. There was one Soviet feldsher at Maksay who was in complete charge of all medication to sick prisoners. The 20 POW doctors were each given a certain area of the camp to take care of as well as certain sick barracks. Patients with contagious diseases were placed in special barracks. These doctors had nothing to do except visit the patients and talk with them because they had no access to any of the camp medicines and they were not allowed to make diagnoses or to decide which of the prisoners were unable to work.
- The usual method of treatment and medication was most inefficient. The 20 German, Rumanian and Hungarian POW doctors each night reported to the Soviet feldsher how many sick prisoners he had in his particular camp area and as far as possible, summarize the diagnosis in each case. At the same 50X1 time, the feldsher also received a report from the sick or hospital barracks and he then compared the two lists and decided how to dispense the medications he had available.

50X1

 $\xi_{i_{1}}\circ\varepsilon$

the only medication dispensed by the feldsher was aspirin in those cases where he personally thought it necessary. Actually, only a small number of the persons on the two sick lists received aspirin from the feldsher, who always administered it 50X1 personally.

10.	There were exceptions to this general procedure of the dispensing of medication. one of these exceptions took place	_
50X1
50X1		_

CONFIDENTIAL

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release @ 50-Yr 2014/11/04 : CIA-RDP	82-00047R000400280	004-2
CONFIDENTIAL

- 3 -

t this time that a commission of medical doctors from Mosco cal facilities at the camp; and just prior to the arrival o ommission, the head doctor came through the hospital barrac	wever, W inspected ommission, the head doctor came through the hospital barrac ommission, the nead doctor came through the hospital barrac	f the
III 3 - 3 - 1	ks and
- Into doctor then said	to one
The same and more	day a
ys, three injections which reduced the fever and	e next
ns were penicillin.	the
	*
hospital and had been at Maksay for some time, commission of medical doctors from Moscow made periodic	34 - 3 9 9
on about eight days perore their arrival at the complant attract to one camp because	4.1.
octor in charge always called all of the pow doctors and and	the office and told them that all the patients were to be real	the Ldshers
office and told them that all the patients were to be washed to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were saled.	the Ldshers ed, shaved
office and told them that all the patients were to be washe to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were asked. Duri commission was in the camp, patients received for the commission was in the camp.	the Ldshers ed, shaved Lng the
office and told them that all the patients were to be washe to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were asked. During commission was in the camp, patients received fair treatments had departed, it was the same story all over and the same story all over a	the Ldshers ed, shaved lng the nt; but
office and told them that all the patients were to be washed to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were asked. During commission was in the camp, patients received fair treatments and departed, it was the same story all over again. The seal commission was a general of the army and he personally the sick harmonics of the army and he personally the sick harmonics of the army and he personally the sick harmonics.	the Ldshers ed, shaved lng the lt; but head of risited
office and told them that all the patients were to be washed to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were asked. During commission was in the camp, patients received fair treatments by had departed, it was the same story all over again. The stall commission was a general of the army and he personally the sick barracks as well as the kitcher.	the Ldshers ed, shaved lng the ut; but head of isited
office and told them that all the patients were to be washed to answer "We have enough to eat" if they were asked. During commission was in the camp, patients received fair treatments and departed, it was the same story all over again. The seal commission was a general of the army and he personally the sick harmonics of the army and he personally the sick harmonics of the army and he personally the sick harmonics.	the Ldshers ed, shaved lng the lt; but head of risited n the rpoon in

Diagnoses

5

5

5

- 12. As I have stated above, the Soviet doctor in charge made all diagnoses that were made and none of the POW doctors were ever allowed to make diagnoses. Maksay was a POW labor camp and every prisoner who could possibly do any work was needed. The Soviet camp officials were afraid that the POW doctors, particularly the Germans, would feel sympathetic for German prisoners and leave at the camp some sick prisoners who might still be able to do some work.
- 13. Diagnoses were very inaccurate and were made without any real examination. The routine procedure called for the sick prisoners to enter the doctor's office where the patient was given a very brief opportunity to describe his pains. The doctor then arbitrarily made his diagnosis. In some cases, a patient's temperature was then taken and if it was 1040 or above, he was sent to the hospital or sick barracks; but if it was below that, he was usually sent back to his barracks and he had to go out and work the next day. As I have mentioned above, except for unusual periods of time, the only medication was aspirin.
- 14. There was only one regular examination period each day and that was between six and seven o'clock in the evening. However, the camp doctor did have afternoon office hours for the sick patients in the camp. The evening office hour was for prisoners after they returned from work; but if any prisoner became ill during the night, he still had to go out to work the next day because there were no examinations in the morning and he had no chance at the afternoon office hours.

Attitude of Medical Personnel Toward the Patients

15. The attitude of Soviet doctors and feldshers toward German patients depended entirely on the person. one Soviet doctor from Georgia at Maksay

CONFIDENTIAL

50X1

CONFIDENTIAL

- 4 -

50X1

50X1

who was terrible. He did not seem to care one bit about the German patients and appeared happy if they died. On the other hand, Soviet doctors and particularly feldshers who expressed sympathy toward the patients and helped them as much as possible with the limited supplies and facilities available. At one time at Maksay, there was a woman Soviet doctor who actually was of German nationality from the Volga and she was especially sympathetic. She talked German to the prisoners; but as a result of trying to help them too much and showing too much sympathy, she herself was trans-

16. Every once in a while, the camp commander would make the announcement that there would not be any sick prisoners tomorrow and that everyone in the camp would go out to work. So the next day there was no one sick, everybody went out to work and that night, the prisoner population of the camp decreased by the death of a number of prisoners during the day who were actually too sick to have left their barracks.

another occasion when the camp commander decided that there would only be 15 prisoners sick on a certain day and he announced that all the other prisoners were all right and would go to work. It was all completely unreasonable.

Description of Hospital Facilities

ferred from this camp.

- 17. At Marshansk, there was a main hospital in one of the permanent buildings but it was used almost exclusively for sick Soviet Army personnel. The prisoner hospital were barracks and in addition, there was a very primitive infirmary which would not be recognized as such in the US.
- 18. At Maksay, a number of barracks served as the hospital. There was also an infirmary which served as the doctor's office. Each barracks held up to 100 sick patients. Both the sick barracks and the regular prisoner barracks at this camp were actually large holes in the ground over which a roof had been placed and sand placed on the roofs. There were very few above-ground buildings, except for the permanent stone buildings, because of the very cold weather and snow cover. The hospital barracks were not heated and there were no beds in them, the patients being stretched out in rows on wooden planks over the dirt floor. There were no mattresses but every two prisoners shared one blanket. Prisoners had very little clothing.
- 19. The floor level of the barracks was about two meters below the level of the ground and it was reached by steps at one end of the hole. All of the barracks originally had wooden planks for floor covering but because previous prisoners had taken up the planks during cold spells and burned them for heat, some of the barracks only had sand or dirt floors. Plank floors that had been burned were never replaced by the Soviet camp officials. Each barracks had two windows in front and two windows in back, each about one foot above the ground level. Double-deck bunks in the regular POW barracks provided accommodations for 200 prisoners.
- 20. The German POW doctors in charge of the sick or hospital barracks tried to keep them as clean as possible which was difficult under the circumstance of partially dirt floors. The camp doctor did not care about cleanliness and none of the prisoners were washed after the initial admittance except on special occasions. Washing facilities for the prisoners were not made available to the German POW doctors.
- 21. Sick prisoners were fed three times a day, receiving 500 grams of soup and two pieces of white bread for breakfast and a small bowl of rice or a wheat and barley mixture with two pieces of bread at the noon and evening meals.

  The soup for sick prisoners was supposed to be better than what the so-called

CONFIDENTIAL

well prisoners received. The meals were sometimes served by German and Hungarian felabases if they were available or by other prisoners. This was a coveted prison task because it afforded the opportunity to obtain extra food in the case of those patients who had just died but for whom a ration had been provided. When the Soviet doubter from Georgia was the chief medical officer of the camp, no German Felabases were allowed to serve the patients.  Efforts To Keep Camp Clean  22. The FORs in the Maksay camp did what they could to keep it clean and free from lice but efforts in this direction were not very successful. Prior to the use of Maksay for German FORs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from it. It was never possible to completely rid any of the impossible to keep the barracks clean. The only permanent stone buildings at Maksay were the infirmary, the administration building, barracks for Soviet personnel and the kitchen and the kitchen and the worst person of the worst parts of being a prisoner of war.  Attempts to Proselyths into Communist Party  24. In the four PON camps in the Orah area, no artempts were ever made and the active and the complete personnel and the kitchen and the communist Party. These four camps were known as a labor ccamps and the entire offort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the parts to Communist Party. These four camps were crown as made of the parts are parts of the parts are parts of the parts are parts of the parts are not the Communist Party. These was one rest camp in Medicagney where the prisoners and the parts are not the Communist Party. There was calculated to the parts are not the Communist Party. There was calculated to the parts are not the Communist Party. There was an anti-Parcist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He appears that were drafted for this parts of the Parts of the parts of the parts of the pa	Declassif	fied in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release @ 50-Yr 2014/11/04 : CIA-RDP82-00047R000	400280004-2 well prisoners received. The meals were sometimes served by German and Hungarian feliabsers if they were awallable or by other prisoners. This was a covered prison tast because it afforded the opportunity to obtain extra food in the case of those patients who had just died but for whom a ration had been provided when the Soviet doctor from Georgia was the chief medical officer of the camp, no German feliabers were allowed to serve the patients.  Efforts To Keep Camp Clean  22. The FCMs in the Makasy camp did what they could to keep it clean and free from lice but efforts in this direction were not very successful. Frior to the use of Makasy for German FOMs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from it. It was succeeped to completely rid any of the barracks of Itce. Because of the dirt walls and floors, it was almost impossible to keep the barrack clean. The only permanent stome buildings do soviet personnel and the kitchen.  23. There was always a shortage of food at all of the FOW camps that we once of the worst parts of all prisoners of war.  Attempts to Froselyths into Communist Party  24. In the four FOW camps in the Orak area, no attempts were cover made into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward equerage out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward expectage out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist Party. These four camps were known as a labor camps and the entire effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners were entered to receive and the entered of the entered and the entered of the entere	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	CONFIDENTIAL
Hungarian reliamener if they were available or by other prisoners. This was a coveted prison test because it afforded the copportunity to obtain extra- food in the case of those patients who had just died but for whom a ration had been provided. When the Soviet doctor from Georgia was the chief medical officer of the camp, no German felicibers were allowed to serve the patients.  Strorts To Keep Camp Clean  22. The FOWs in the Makesay camp did what they could to keep it clean and free from lice but efforts in this direction were not very successful. Prior to the use of Makeay for German FOWs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from the. It was never possible to completely rid any of the barracks of lice. Because of the dirt walls and floors, it was almost impossible to keep the barracks clean. The only permanent stone buildings as Makeay were he antemary the administration building, barracks for Soviet personnel and the kitchen.  23. There was always a shortage of food at all of the POW camps.  That was one of the worst parts of being a prisoner of war.*  Attempts to Proselyths into Communist Party*  24. In the four FOW camps in the Orek area, no attempts were over safe or camps and the orther samps in the Orek area, no attempts were over an advor camps and the orther samps in the Orek area, no attempts were over safe or camps and the orther samps in the Orek area, no attempts were over an action to the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist Party. These four camps were and to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25. different and serious thempts were made to proselyths prisoners into the Communist Party. Then thempts were made to proselyths prisoners into the compunity prisoners were thoroughly indocrinated but it did not make much series because their a very large of the communist propagation in the large of		- 5
22. The FOWs in the Makaay camp did what they could to keep it clean and free from lice but efforts in this direction were not very successful. Prior to the use of Makasy for German FOWs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from it. It was never possible to completely rid any of the berracks of lice. Because of the dirt walls and floores, it was almost impossible to keep the barracks clean. The only permanent stone buildings at Makasy were the infrimary, the administration building, barracks for Soviet personnel and the kitchen.  23. There was always a shortage of food at all of the POW camps 50X1  Attempts to Proselytiz into Communist Party  24. In the four POW camps 1 into Orsk area, no attempts were ever made 1 into the Communist Party, These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward aquesting out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propagands, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25.		Hungarian feldshers if they were available or by other prisoners. This was a coveted prison task because it afforded the opportunity to obtain extra food in the case of those patients who had just died but for whom a ration had been provided. When the Soviet doctor from Georgia was the chief medical	50X1
the use of Maksay for German POWs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from it. It was never possible to completely rid any of the barracks of lice. Because of the dirt walls and floors, it was almost impossible to keep the barracks clean. The only permanent stone buildings at Maksay were the infirmary, the administration building, barracks for Soviet personnel and the ktohen.  23. There was always a shortage of food at all of the POW camps 50X1  Attempts to Proselytis into Communist Party  That was one of the worst parts of being a prisoner of war.  Attempts to Proselytis into Communist Party  In the four POW camps and two other camps in the Orsk area, no attempts were ever made 50X1  Attempts to Proselytis although the prisoners were known as labor camps and 1 into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and 1 into the Communist propagands, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25.  26. There was an assignment of prisoners that in the rest camps, the treatment was different and serious attempts were made to proselydis prisoners into the Communist Party. There was one rest camp in Mednogorsky where the prisoners were thoroughly indoctrinated but it did not make much ease because when a German prisoner reached a rest camp, it was too late for indoctrination. Most of the rest camp risoners died anyway.  26. There was an anti-Fascist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWs that were drafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda. The charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda. The least of the communist propaganda who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organize		Efforts To Keep Camp Clean	30/(1
25. There was always a shortage of frond at all of the Pw camps  Attempts to Proselytiz into Communist Party  24. In the four PCW camps and two other camps in the Orsk area, no attempts were ever made into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propaganda, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25. prisoners that in the rest camps, the treatment was different and serious attempts were made to proselytiz prisoners into the Communist Party. There was one rest camp in Mendangorsk where the prisoners were thoroughly indoctrinated but it did not make much sense because when a German prisoner reached a rest camp; it was too late for indoctrination. Most of the rest camp prisoners died anyway.  26. There was an anti-Fascist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWs that were drafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda. has the director of the "Red Corner" in one of the barracks assigned was a German junior officer who definitely did not want this job but was forced to do it. He was also forced to talk the Communist line in lectures to the other POWs. However, there were other POWs in the "Red Corner" who voluntarily joined the smit-Fascist office because the food rations were doubled for these people.  27. the Soviet camp personnel actually wanted to make members of the Communist Party out of any of the prisoners. They wated to spread as thoroughly as possible Communist propaganda but membership in the party was something else. What was actually wanted in the labor camps was work, work, work.  LIBRARY SUBJECT & AREA CODES	22.	from lice but efforts in this direction were not very successful. Prior to the use of Maksay for German POWs, it had been used for Soviet political prisoners who left it in a miserable and very dirty condition upon being transferred from it. It was never possible to completely rid any of the barracks of lice. Because of the dirt walls and floors, it was almost impossible to keep the barracks clean. The only permanent stone buildings at Maksay were the infirmary, the administration building, barracks for	50X1
24. In the four POW camps and two other camps in the Orsk area, no attempts were ever made into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propaganda, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25.	23.	There was always a shortage of food at all of the POW camps and two other camps in the Orek ares, no attempts were ever made  into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propaganda, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25.  prisoners that in the rest camps, the treatment was different and serious attempts were made to proselydis prisoners into the Communist Party. There was one rest camp in Mednogorsk where the prisoners were thoroughly indoctrinated but it did not make much sense because when a German prisoner reached a rest camp, it was too late for indoctrination. Most of the rest camp prisoners did anyway.  26. There was an anti-Fascist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWs that were darafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda.  that the director of the "Red Corner" in one of the barracks assigned was a German junior officer who definitely did not want this job but was forced to do it. He was also forced to talk the Communist line in lectures to the other POWs. However, there were other POWs in the "Red Corner" who voluntarily joined the anti-Fascist office because the food rations were doubled for these people.  27.  the Soviet camp personnel actually wanted to make members of the Communist Party out of any of the prisoners. They wanted to spread as thoroughly as possible Communist propaganda but membership in the party was something else. What was actually wanted in the labor camps was work, work, work.  LIBRARY SUBLECT & AREA CODES  - erga		Attempts to Proselytiz into Communist Party	50X1 into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propaganda, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for this.  25.	24.		50X1 different and serious attempts were made to proselytic prisoners into the Communist Party. There was one rest camp in Mednogorsk where the prisoners were thoroughly indoctrinated but it did not make much sense because when a German prisoner reached a rest camp, it was too late for indoctrination.  Most of the rest camp prisoners died anyway.  26. There was an anti-Fascist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWs that were drafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda.  that the director of the "Red Corner" in one of the barracks assigned was a German junior officer who definitely did not want this job but was forced to do it. He was also forced to talk the Communist line in lectures to the other POWs. However, there were other POWs in the "Red Corner" who voluntarily joined the anti-Fascist office because the food rations were doubled for these people.  27.		into the Communist Party. These four camps were known as labor camps and the entire effort was directed toward squeezing out as much work from the prisoners as possible. Although the prisoners were exposed on a regular basis to Communist propaganda, no real effort was made to intensively influence the prisoners to become Communists because there was no time for	50X1
26. There was an anti-Fascist officer in the Maksay camp who seemed to be in charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWS that were drafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda.  that the director of the "Red Corner" in one of the barracks assigned was a German junior officer who definitely did not want this job but was forced to do it. He was also forced to talk the Communist line in lectures to the other POWS. However, there were other POWS in the "Red Corner" who voluntarily joined the anti-Fascist office because the food rations were doubled for these people.  27.	25.	different and serious attempts were made to proselytim prisoners into the Communist Party. There was one rest camp in Mednogorsk where the prisoners were thoroughly indoctrinated but it did not make much sense because when a German prisoner reached a rest camp, it was too late for indoctrination.
members of the Communist Party out of any of the prisoners. They wanted to spread as thoroughly as possible Communist propaganda but membership in the party was something else. What was actually wanted in the labor camps was work, work, work.  LIBRARY SUBJECT & AREA CODES  - end -  CONFIDENTIAL  50X1	26.	charge of disseminating propaganda. He organized what was known as a "Red Corner" in each barracks and the POWs that were drafted for this "Red Corner" detail put up slogans, pictures and other propaganda. that the director of the "Red Corner" in one of the barracks assigned was a German junior officer who definitely did not want this job but was forced to do it. He was also forced to talk the Communist line in lectures to the other POWs. However, there were other POWs in the "Red Corner" who voluntarily joined the anti-Fascist office because the food
	27.	members of the Communist Party out of any of the prisoners. They wanted to spread as thoroughly as possible Communist propaganda but membership in the party was something else. What was actually wanted in the labor camps was work, work, work.  LIBRARY SUBJECT & AREA CODES  - end  - confidential
			^